Summary

Karpenko V. Education and Mentality: a Philosophic Viewpoint. The author grounds that, firstly, education has great potential for influencing mentality. However this influence cannot help in making mentality in the world totally homogeneous, as the systems of education in different countries and regions are not homogeneous, as well as the world cannot be homogeneous culturally, ideologically, religiously etc. Secondly, contemporary education increases the number of people with distorted mentality. World-outlook unsystemicity is responsible for this. The accent should be made on the solution of the latter problem. Keywords: education, system of education, mentality, the mental, distorted mentality.
