Definition of «terminology» and «terminological system» concepts in modern linguistics

In modern terminology, there are two basic approaches to understanding the terminology and terminological system the concepts. The common view is that the terminology is a separate system within the vocabulary of the language, which consists of terminological units' nomination. The differences begin to arise about the nature, sources and results of systematic collections of lexical items for special purposes. The article critically analyzes different approaches of scientists in the definition of «terminology» and «terminological system» concepts. On the one hand, scientists identify terminology and terminological system concepts, agreeing that the first one is systematic by nature. Others, in turn, argue that branch terminological systems exist as complete separate systems within the terminology. Main differences of opinions on the issue are considered and the own definition of «terminological system» concept is suggested.

Keywords: terminology, terminological systems.
