The Ukrainian State Disorder: Imperatives of National Sovereignty Insurance After Twenty Years of Independence

The article presents an innovative fusion of the approach to main events and fundamental problems of state sovereignty of the Ukrainian nation after more than twenty years of State Independence. The author takes on certain important theoretical terrain and introduces particularities of state sovereignty imperatives within the period of existing Ukraine as an Independent State.

The problem of the Ukrainian Independence is closely connected with the idea of the Ukrainian sobornist'. So long-waited creation of an Independent Ukrainian State has already been resulted neither from its own national liberation in historic competition nor from self-solution of state and national problems. The concluding result has emerged from the fall of one of the leading empires of the 20-th century – the Soviet Union. And as the most striking paradox of the newly formed state appeared to be highest-ranking Communist party nomenclature that has placed oneself at the head of state ruling. From the very start all power control began to be exercised under the domination of state and bureaucratic segment rather than in favour of overwhelming majority of state population.

The unlimited ruling of governing elite is characterized by self-dependency, intentional separation from the maturity of society's interests, the availability of personal self-controlled inner structure of management, coalescence with powerful oligarchical industrial and financial clans as well as unparalleled subordination of the existing governing system to the only few bodies of the high-ranking families. All this unsurprisingly resulted in political activity of all legally elected the first-ranking persons of the state starting from the first President of Ukraine to have been subsequently marked with absolute allegiance and unconditional obedience to the foregoing created system of total state autocrat subordination.

But within the period of 2012–2015 it seems to be expected a sort of «social turbulence» that may cause ruining «the state power privatization» by the governing elite. And it always worth remembering.

Keywords: imperatives, state sovereignty, a period of indepenence, cognitive dissonance, multivectorial policy, diversified balanced policy, vectorless policy, a systems analysis.
